

Brook has called the Austin community home since moving here 25 years ago from the west coast.

Brook brings with her a keen interest and background advocating for community populations as a CASA in the court system and casework providing direct aid and services to Austin's homeless community. Her interest in marginalized communities began while pursuing her Bachelor of Arts in Sociology and Psychology with an emphasis in criminology coursework.

She and her husband, Dan, raised their two daughters in the Austin community where she volunteered in AISD classrooms, led a Girl Scout and spent countless hours and weekends at her daughters' many sports and athletics events. After nearly 2 decades dedicated to this volunteer work, Brook enjoys all of her new found free time gardening, growing vegetables, cooking and learning to watercolor. Brook also enjoys traveling with her husband, Dan and spending time with their 2 adult daughters at their southwest Austin home.
